How to read this

Horary

A horary chart is cast for the moment a sincere question is asked and understood. It is read as a picture of that question alone.

Perfection

The matter completes when the significators join by an applying conjunction, sextile, square, trine or opposition before either changes sign.

Translation and collection

A faster intermediary may carry light between the significators; a slower, weightier planet may collect their light.

Reception

Reception shows favour or willingness when one planet occupies a dignity belonging to another.

Void of course

A Moon making no further exact Ptolemaic aspect before leaving its sign usually shows little comes of the matter.

Five-degree rule

A planet within five degrees of the following cusp is treated as acting in that next house.

This is a mechanical reading of Lilly's rules. A practising horary astrologer would also weigh the planets' natures, the querent's circumstances and the other planets in the relevant houses before giving a final answer.
